CALL FOR PAPERS

Abstract submissions for both oral and poster presentations covering all aspects of magnetic resonance are welcome from scientists world-wide. We are striving to ensure the broadest possible coverage of recent important advances with a high active participation of young researchers. For this purpose, about half of the oral presentations will be chosen from submitted abstracts. To help in this process of developing an exciting, high-quality scientific program, we strongly encourage you to submit your abstract on-line as soon as possible. The scientific program committee will then select ~100 of the submitted abstracts for oral presentations. On-line submission will begin on February 10, 2021. The final deadline for abstracts is April 30, before 23:59 Japanese Standard Time.

Abstracts will be organized into the following categories:

1. Solution NMR: New Methods
2. Solution NMR: Biological Applications
3. Solution NMR: Metabolomics
4. Solid-State NMR: New Methods
5. Solid-State NMR: Biological Applications
6. Solid-State NMR: Materials Science
7. In-cell/In vivo NMR: Life Science & Medicine
8. DNP/Hyperpolarization
9. ESR: New Methods
10. ESR: Material Science
11. ESR: Biological Applications
12. ESR: Dosimetry/ Earth Science
13. In vivo ESR: Life Science & Medicine
14. MR Imaging: Life Science & Medicine
15. Other areas of magnetic resonance and applications

Awards

The following awards will be presented:

- APNMR Poster Award: APNMR Poster Awards will be selected from poster presentations submitted from Asia Pacific countries.
- IES Poster Awards: IES Poster Awards will be selected from EPR-related poster presentations by young researchers.
- SEST Awards: Poster and Oral Presentation Awards will be selected from presentations by young SEST members. (Details will be notified to SEST members after the program is decided.)
- Other awards: Several other awards will also be given for posters and contributed talks.
